My Dream job

I want to be a psychologist when I grow up because I want to help other people and make them have a happy and healthy life. If I become a psychologist, I will listen to what they want and find out their difficulties. Then I will use my knowledge to suggest them some solutions, or give them medicines to help them.

In order to be a psychologist, I need to be patient so that I can gather more information on their problems. Also, I need to be logical so that I can interpret what exactly are the difficulties they are facing. In addition, I need to be caring so that I can come up with the best solutions for them.

I think I am suitable for this job because I am patient and I am caring for other people. I have to study more and gain more knowledge on psychology in order to help other people in the future.
