To be Honest or Not to be?

Once upon a time, there were two farmers, Jina and Jamie. They lived in a small house next to a river in a forest. Jina was the girl in the grass hat, a vest, shorts and sports shoes. Jamie was the boy with a cap, in the leggings, a T-shirt and old rain boots. One day, they were chatting next to the river.

Suddenly, a strong wind blew. Jina dropped her hat and Jamie dropped her cap! They were sad because those were their only cap and hat. Then, a boy came. ‘Oh! Who are you?’ Jamie asked. ‘I am the God of Water. While I was sleeping, there were some belongings dropped on me. Did you drop anything?’ ‘Yes! We did! Did you see our hat and cap?’ Jina asked.

The God of Water brought two hats to Jina and Jamie. One was old, the other one was new. ‘Which is yours?’ he asked. ‘This one for sure!’ Jina pointed at the new hat and said. ‘Alright. How about you, Jamie? Yours is new or old?’ asked the God of Water. ‘The old one is mine,’ Jamie replied. ‘Jina, you are greedy! You should be honest. Jamie, you are honest. You will get these two caps. Jina, I will punish you!’ the God said angrily. In a flash, Jina became an ugly mouse by the God of Water. Jina learnt a lesson but it was too late.
