To be Honest or Not to be

On the exam day at the school library, Lila, the girl in the pink and white dress with the curly hair had just arrived at the school library, just to see her friend, Kira, who was in the black hoodie, the purple leggings and with the black headphones was writing something on a tiny piece of paper quickly, as if she was on a whim. ‘What are you doing?’ asked Lila curiously. Kira didn’t respond. Then, Lila asked again but still didn’t get a response so she asked for the third time and Kira stopped and sighed, ‘It’s none of your business, Lila. Just go away and do something else.’

After hearing what her best friend said, Lila frowned her eyebrows in suspicion, her friend wasn’t like this before. Maybe... ‘You’re not trying to cheat, are you? Right?’ asked Lila. Kira widened her eyes. ‘I ... I’m not trying to cheat, Lila. It must be your imagination,’ stammered Kira. ‘So I am right, why are you doing this though? Aren’t you good at English?’ asked Lila. Afterwards, Kira explained to Lila. It turned out that she was afraid that she might fail in the English exam because she thought that the exam would be very difficult for her. ‘Kira, I understand that you don’t want to fail the exam and want to get one hundred marks but you should believe in yourself and use our own strength to succeed. If you were cheating, you wouldn't feel satisfied. Instead, you would feel guilty,' explained Lila. Kira paused for a while and told Lila she would consider her advice.

In the end, after the exam, Kira didn't cheat and thanked Lila for warning her.
