Eric's Funny Day

They did not know what to do. Then the genie had an idea. 'We can ask for my friend Albert for help. He is a wise wizard,' he suggested. Eric agreed. The genie told Eric that Albert lived on a mountain far away.

They set off to Albert's house on the next day. They went through a forest easily but they encountered a difficulty, which was they needed to cross a wide river. They found some wood nearby so they decided to build a bridge. One day later, they crossed the river and started to climb the mountain.

Half day had passed already, they finally arrived Albert's house. Albert asked them to sit down and told them how to make the antidote. Therefore, they needed to make the antidote by themselves. Blub! Blub! The antidote was made.

In the end, Eric shrunk to his normal size and lived with his grandma happily ever after. Eric also learnt that he needed to live in the moment.
