My Dream Job

Everybody has a dream job, and my dream job is to be a software engineer. I want to be a software engineer when I grow up because I am interested in technology and I also love designing computer programs and games.

If I become a software engineer, I will design the most interesting computer game. I will also create program for developing cool and awesome robots. To become a software engineer is not that easy. I need to study hard so that I can earn a degree in software engineering. I need to be creative so that I can develop innovative computer program. I even need to have good critical thinking so that I can solve complex computer problems.

At last, I am suitable for this job because I am good at English and Mathematics. I am also creative. In order to make my dream job come true, I will need to start studying hard from now on. I can also take some online classes about computer coding and hopefully I can enter a very good university for software engineering in the future.
