To Be Honest Or Not To Be

Once upon a time, there were two miners. The tall one was Sammy and the short one was Jandel.

One day, Sammy and Jandel went to the cave to do their mining works. Unluckily, Jandel lost his copper hammer and he couldn't find it. Suddenly, the God of the cave showed up and asked him, "Which one is yours? Is the golden one, diamond one or the copper one?" Jandel said, "The copper one." Because the God of the cave knew he wasn't lying, he gave him all the three hammers.

The greedy miner Sammy knew about that. He also wanted to have a diamond hammer, so he went to the cave and deliberately broke his copper hammer. The God showed up again and asked the same question. Sammy quickly told the God that his hammer was a diamond one. The God knew he was lying, so Sammy got nothing but he was turned into a short man by the God.

In this story, I learned that we shouldn't lie and must be honest.
