To be Honest or Not to be?

Long time ago there were two girls named Sally and Violet. They both were flower collectors. Sally wore a white top, blue denim shorts and a colorful hat. Violet wore a skirt, a checked shirt and earrings.

One day, Sally and Violet went to Tranquil Forest to collect flowers as usual. They especially went deep inside the forest today to search for more flowers. After an hour, Sally and Violet's basket were full of colorful, stunning flowers.

"Come on, Let's go home," said Violet. Sally agreed. As they went along, Sally suddenly slipped her hand and dropped the flower basket into the river. "Oh no! How can I get it back?" spoke Sally, she cried in despair. Violet tried to comfort her, but she cried as hard as she could. But out of nowhere, the God of the River, Poseidon, appeared. He had a mermaid tail replaced by legs and with the curly light blue hair. Poseidon spoke, "Is this gold basket filled with diamonds yours?" Sally was quickly attracted by the gold basket. She lied, "Yes, its..." Violet interrupted, "No, that's actually not hers." She whispered to Sally, "Sorry, Sally. We shouldn't lie." Then Poseidon lifted Violet up in the air. "I'm just missing the helper. You are honest. Will you be my helper?" He told her. Violet immediately excitedly.

Poseidon looked at Sally. He turned her into a cactus. "This will teach you a lesson," he thought. Sally was raged with anger. She wanted to fight back, but she couldn't move. On the other side, Violet and Poseidon already disappeared in a flash. Sally learned that if she ever lies again, she would take the consequences.
