Be More Shark-Friendly

I am a friendly shark, and I am writing to tell you about what is happening to us.

The first problem we face is overhunting. People hunt sharks for their fins to make shark fin soup. As a result, there are very few sharks left in the ocean. People should stop consuming shark fin soup to protect us.

The second problem we are facing is water pollution. Factories and individuals dump toxic waste into the sea, which severely pollutes the water. To save our habitat, people must stop dumping harmful waste into the ocean.

The third problem we experience is noise pollution. Large boats and ships make a lot of loud noise under the water. Consequently, sharks lose their way and become disoriented. People should avoid sailing large vessels near shark habitats.

Please help us by making sure these problems stop happening. We hope you can tell others about the importance of protecting sharks, too.
